What you missed if you didn't catch today's program © Speaker Jake Kevorkian, Numis Network – ake visited us from Tampa, FLA (although he has fond memories of visiting family in Watertown and Hudson/Lake Boone, MA). A proponent of insuring one's 'cash' by investing in gold and silver, Jake described the difference between investing in collectible coins vs. everyday coins. Since the Recession of 2008, Jake has been even more convinced that everyone would benefit from diversifying their portfolios and adding collectible, precious metals to their investment portfolios.

The ability to invest in gold and silver is a relatively recent phenomenon. In fact, in 1933 it became illegal to own bullion except for collectibles. In 1971, the US went off the Gold Standard. Then, in 1974 it was again okay to buy gold. By 1986, President Reagan encouraged such investment by authorizing production of gold and silver eagle coins.

Investment in precious metals (whether or not one takes physical possession of them) is seen by many as the purchase of a lasting asset. The proof: in 1966, 2,500 silver Eagles (dollars) had the same value as $2,500 paper dollars and could purchase one Ford Mustang. By 2011, those same coins had many times the purchasing power of 2,500 paper dollars and could purchase three new Mustangs and a luxury cruise! The point: precious metals hold their value over time better than dollars.

The 4-Way Test

...of the things we say or do

- 1. Is it the TRUTH?
- 2. Is it FAIR to all concerned?
- 3. Will it build GOOD WILL and BETTER FRIENDSHIPS?
- 4. Will it be BENEFI-CIAL to all concerned?

Coins are graded by official grading agencies. They are ANACS, PCGS, NGC and IGC. Coins have Intrinsic Value (value of the metal in the coin); Legal Face Value is what the government declares their worth ($1 – Silver; $50 – Gold); and Market Value is what someone is willing to pay for them.

Jake showed a 1986 American Silver Eagle with a face value of $1, but was actually worth $700. The same one ounce of silver is currently valued at about $42 because of the intrinsic value of the silver, but $700 because of the collectible value of its perfect grading, etc. At any one time, a Silver Eagle could be valued at $700, but only if someone in the marketplace were willing to pay $700 to purchase it.

Today because one ounce of gold is valued at $1,837, that is the intrinsic value of a $50 gold piece.

Graded and certified coins, like gold and silver, shouldn't be considered an investment per se but rather collectible coins; as collectibles, they can have investment potential from either appreciation of the precious metal or demand based on the numismatic value; as simply precious metals, which collectible coins benefit from also, it's about transferring paper assets (i.e. cash) declining in value to something which holds value better and that's why it's said that people tend to "run" to precious metals when currencies are declining in value.

Traditional coin collectors collect numismatic coins. Their value is determined by trading in the marketplace. They can be of great value; last year one penny sold for $3.5M.

If you have coins you would like valued, you should go to one of the rating agencies mentioned above (ANACS, PCGS, etc.) It is NOT advisable to clean coins you have; it may reduce their worth. Numismatics are collectibles – they are fun!

Other news...

Dave Brower reported that, on his vacation, he attended a meeting of the Rotary Club of Sandwich with Mary Carlson.
